Vorwort

Anton Bruckners Messe in d-Moll WAB 26 feierte am 10. Februar 1867 eine sehr erfolgreiche Wiener Erstaufführung in der Hofburgkapelle. Daraus ergab sich offenbar, nach Bruckners eigenen Angaben,¹ der Auftrag zur Komposition einer weiteren Messe für die Wiener Hofkapelle, dem sich die Entstehung der Messe in f-Moll WAB 28 verdankt. Mit der Komposition hat Bruckner schon bald begonnen, nachdem er am 8. August 1867 von einem Kuraufenthalt in Bad Kreuzen zurückgekehrt war. Dorthin hatte ihn ein Nervenzusammenbruch geführt, eine „Neurasthenie“, die sich u. a. in Migräne und neurotischen Zwängen (Zähzwang) äußerte. Bruckners Zustand war in dieser Phase desolat und verzweifelt; er konnte aber nach dreimonatiger Therapie als im Wesentlichen geheilt entlassen werden. Über die konkreten Ursachen dieser Krise ist nichts Näheres bekannt. Ein Zusammenhang u. a. mit seinen langjährigen erfolglosen Versuchen, als Komponist in Wien zu reüssieren, verbunden mit starken Selbstzweifeln, mag nahe liegen; vielleicht auch seine (vermutlich wegen des Altersunterschieds) zurückgewiesene Werbung um die 20 Jahre jüngere Josefine Lang. Obwohl Bruckner sich auch nach seinem Kuraufenthalt, wie er später schrieb, noch als „kranker Mann“ gefühlt hatte,² arbeitete er offenbar intensiv an der neuen Messe. Wie die Datierungen im Autograph erkennen lassen, erstreckten sich die Kompositionssarbeiten über ein Jahr von September 1867 bis zum selben Monat im Folgejahr.

Die erste Aufführung der Messe war ursprünglich schon für Ende November 1868 geplant, wurde dann auf Januar 1869 verschoben und schließlich, da Hofkapellmeister Johann Herbeck sie, offenbar nach den ersten Probenerfahrungen, für „zu lang und unspielbar“ hielt, zunächst zurückgezogen. Schließlich nahm Bruckner die Sache selbst in die Hand, mietete das Wiener Opernorchester und dirigierte die erste Aufführung am 16. Juni 1872 in der Wiener Augustinerkirche, die in den Rezensionen ein überwiegend positives Echo hatte: Die Messe lege „von der Erfindungskraft und dem ungewöhnlichen Können des Komponisten das rühmlichste Zeugnis“ ab,³ und „jeder feiner fühlende Geist“ werde „sich von dem Werke ergriffen fühlen“⁴, wobei auch die „schwierige Ausführbarkeit“⁵ des Werks erwähnt wird. Am 8. Dezember des folgenden Jahres erklang das Werk dann auch in der Hofburgkapelle, wieder unter Leitung des Komponisten. In den Jahren 1876, 1877 und 1882 bis 1885 erlebte die Messe in f-Moll jeweils eine weitere Aufführung im Rahmen der Liturgie in der Hofkapelle (alle von Bruckner dirigiert), außerdem 1879 in Ofen (Budapest) anlässlich des „Kaisertages“ am 27. April. Danach folgten zu Lebzeiten Bruckners nur noch Darbietungen im Konzertsaal, initiiert durch den Wiener Akademischen Wagner-Verein, der im Rahmen seiner „Internen Musikabende“ (jeweils von Josef Schalk geleitet) 1888, 1890 und 1892 in insgesamt fünf Konzerten zunächst einzelne Sätze der Messe mit Begleitung des Klaviers (teils zusätzlich mit Blechbläsern, einem Violinsolisten sowie Orgel oder Harmonium) darbot; am 23. März 1893 führte der Verein im Großen Musikvereinsaal auch die vollständige Messe mit Orchester auf – dieses Konzert wurde zu einem der größten öffentlichen Erfolge Bruckners und führte auch dazu, dass das Werk ebenda nochmals am 4. November 1894 aus Anlass von Bruckners 70. Geburtstag gegeben wurde, mit Begleitung der Wiener Philharmoniker und dirigiert von Wilhelm Gericke.

Die Solo-Vokalstimmen werden in unserer Ausgabe gemäß den Hauptquellen⁶ auf eigenen Systemen wiedergegeben, ebenso die an manchen Stellen notierten Verweise „col Soprano“ etc., die mutmaßlich die Mitwirkung der jeweiligen Solostimme in der entsprechenden Stimme des Chores meinen. Diese Verweise finden sich am Beginn des Kyrie sowie im „Crucifixus“ des Credo⁷, jedoch nicht an weiteren analogen Stellen (z. B. im Gloria). Ob dies von Bruckner bewusst unterschieden worden ist, muss offenbleiben. Die Praxis jedenfalls, die Solopassagen mit Sängern aus dem Chor zu besetzen, war für Bruckner nicht nur in seinen frühen Werken noch lebendig (etwa bei der Missa solemnis von 1854), sondern auch beim vorliegenden Werk. Das zeigen nicht zuletzt einige Rezensionen, in denen (bei liturgischen Aufführungen) Knabensolisten namentlich genannt sind (und deren Können bestaunt wird).⁸ Auch die Verwendung der Begriffe „Solo“ und „Tutti“ stimmt mit dieser Praxis überein (erst in seinem Te Deum von 1884 unterscheidet Bruckner stattdessen „Solo“ und „Chor“). In den zeitgenössischen Darbietungen der Messe in f-Moll außerhalb von Kirchenräumen war jedoch die Besetzung der Solopartien mit Berufssängern üblich;⁹ in diesem Fall dürfte auch heute die Entscheidung über die Mitwirkung der Solisten in den Chorpartien im Einzelfall zu treffen sein.

Nachdr. 1974; hier Bd. 3/1, S. 473, Ann. 2. – Bruckner hatte auch tatsächlich noch ein halbes Jahr nach seinem Kuraufenthalt Kontakt zu seinem Kurarzt Keyhl, der ihm brieflich weitere Empfehlungen zu Therapie und Diät gab; schließlich war Bruckner nochmals in Bad Kreuzen von August bis September 1868, also während der letzten Kompositionssphase der Messe. Foreword

Anton Bruckner's Mass in D minor WAB 26 enjoyed a very successful Vienna premiere at the Court Chapel on 10 February 1867. According to Bruckner's own statements,¹ this apparently resulted in the commission to compose another mass for the Vienna Court Chapel, to which the Mass in F minor WAB 28 owes its existence. Bruckner began the composition soon after returning on 8 August from a spa in Bad Kreuzen, a visit which was brought on by a nervous breakdown, a "neurasthenia" which manifested itself in migraines and neurotic compulsions (compulsive counting), among other things. Bruckner's condition at this stage was very poor and desperate; however, he was able to be discharged as essentially cured following three months of therapy. Nothing more is known about the specific causes of this crisis. There may be, amongst others, a connection to his many years of unsuccessful attempts to gain success as a composer in Vienna, this in connection with strong self-doubt; perhaps also his (presumably due to the large age difference) rejected courtship of Josefine Lang, who was 20 years younger, also played a role. Although Bruckner, as he later wrote, still felt to be a "sick man" even after his stay at the spa,² he apparently worked intensively on the new Mass. As the dates in the autograph indicate, the compositional work spanned over a year from September 1867 to the same month in the following year.

Originally the first performance of the Mass was already planned for the end of November 1868, but was then postponed until January 1869 and finally, after the first practical experiences in rehearsal, it was withdrawn, since the Court Conductor Johann Herbeck apparently regarded the work as "too long and unplayable." Eventually Bruckner took matters into his own hands, rented the Vienna Opera Orchestra and conducted the first performance on 16 June 1872 in the Church of St. Augustin in Vienna, which received a predominantly positive reception: The Mass displays "the most praiseworthy testimony to the composer's inventiveness and unusual skill,"³ and "every finely feeling mind" will "feel moved by the work,"⁴ while the work's "difficult performability"⁵ was also mentioned. On 8 December of the following year the work was then also heard in the Court Chapel, again under the direction of the composer. In the years 1876, 1877 and again from 1882 to 1885 the Mass in F minor was given further performances within the framework of the liturgy in the Hofkapelle (all conducted by Bruckner), and in addition in Ofen (Budapest) in 1879 on the occasion of the "Festival for the Emperor" on 27 April. Thereafter during Bruckner's lifetime these were followed only by performances in the concert hall, initiated by the Academic Wagner Society of Vienna within the framework of its "in-house music evenings" (each conducted by Josef Schalk) in 1888, 1890, and 1892 for a total of five concerts initially presenting individual movements from the Mass accompanied by piano (in addition to brass, a violin soloist as well as an organ or a harmonium). On 23 March the Society also performed the complete Mass with orchestra in the Great Music Hall of the Musikverein – this concert was one of Bruckner's greatest public triumphs and it also led to the work again being performed in the same venue on 4 November 1894 on the occasion of Bruckner's 70th birthday, this time accompanied by the Vienna Philharmonic, conducted by Wilhelm Gericke.

The present edition renders the solo vocal parts in accordance with the primary sources,⁶ each on their own staff, likewise in some passages the indication "col Soprano", etc., which presumably means the participation of the respective solo voice with the corresponding voice of the choir. This indication is found at the beginning of the Kyrie, as well as in the "Crucifixus" of the Credo,⁷ however not in further analogous passages (e. g., in the Gloria). Whether this was consciously differentiated by Bruckner must remain open. In any cases, the practice of using singers from the choir for solo passages was for Bruckner still current, not only in his early works (for example in the Missa solemnis from 1854), but also in the present work. This is shown, not least by some reviews in which (for liturgical performances) boy soloists are mentioned by name (and their skills are admired).⁸ The use of the terms "Solo" and "Tutti" is also in accordance with this practice (only in his Te Deum of 1884 did Bruckner distinguish between "Solo" and "Choir"). However, in contemporary presentations of the Mass in F minor outside of the church the solo parts were filled by professional singers;⁹ in this case, even today the decision concerning the participation of soloists in the choral parts should be made on a case-by-case basis.

² According to Göllerich/Auer (as in note 4), vol. 3/1, p. 473, note 2. – Actually, half a year after his stay at the spa Bruckner still maintained contact with Doctor Keyhl, who was his doctor there; they corresponded and Keyhl gave him further recommendations concerning therapy and diet; finally, Bruckner was again at Bad Kreuzen from August to September 1868, thus during the last phase of the composition of the Mass. See Renate Grasberger, article Bad Kreuzen, in: ABLO, http://www.bruckner-online.at/ABLO_d1e7234 (accessed 17 November 2022).

⁶ For these and for further information on the work and the edition see the Foreword and the Critical Report in the full score (Carus 27.094).

⁷ In our edition however, in the "Crucifixus" the basso solo part in question is written out without the original indication "col Basso."

Musical score page 109. The vocal parts consist of three staves: soprano (G clef), alto (C clef), and bass (F clef). The piano accompaniment is in the bass clef staff at the bottom. The vocal parts sing "li - us Pa" and "tris." with various dynamics like dim., tr., and poco a poco dim.. The piano part features eighth-note patterns. Large white arrows and circles highlight specific notes and dynamics in the vocal parts.

This musical score page contains four systems of music. System 1 (measures 285-287) includes vocal parts (Soprano, Alto, Tenor, Bass) and instrumental parts (Legni, Archi, Trombones, Timpani). System 2 (measure 288) features vocal parts (Soprano, Alto, Tenor, Bass) and a Cor solo part. System 3 (measure 291) shows bassoon parts. System 4 (measure 293) shows bassoon parts again. Large white graphic shapes, including arrows and loops, are overlaid on the staves, particularly in the second system, suggesting a performance technique or a visual representation of the music's flow.

This musical score page features five staves of music. The top three staves are for the 'Coro' (choir), with lyrics 've-nit, be-ne-di-ctus qui ve-nit,' repeated twice, followed by 'in' and another 'in'. The fourth staff shows woodwind parts for Flute (Fl) and strings (Archi), with dynamics 'p' and 'pp'. The fifth staff begins at measure 57, showing lyrics 'be-ne-di-' and 'be-ne-di-' again, followed by 'no-mi-ne' and 'Do-mi-ni,' repeated. The bottom two staves show bassoon (Cb) and oboe (Ob) parts. Large, stylized graphic letters 'C' and 'A' are superimposed on the middle section of the score, partially obscuring the music. Measure numbers 53 and 57 are indicated at the start of their respective sections.
